Water Fluoridation: Physiological effects of Ingested Fluoride-Mitigation and Management

By

Dr. Shubhangi Tripathi

Water fluoridation is the controlled adjustment of fluoride to a public water supply solely to reduce tooth decay. Fluoridated water contains fluoride at a level that is effective for preventing cavities; this can occur naturally or by adding fluoride. Fluoridated water operates on tooth surfaces: in the mouth, it creates low levels of fluoride in saliva, which reduces the rate at which tooth enamel demineralizes and increases the rate at which it remineralizes in the early stages of cavities. Typically a fluoridated compound is added to drinking water. Defluoridation is needed when the naturally occurring fluoride level exceeds recommended limits. In 2011, the World Health Organization suggested a level of fluoride from 0.5 to 1.5 mg/L, depending on climate, local environment, and other sources of fluoride. Bottled water typically has unknown fluoride levels.

Tooth decay remains a major public health concern in most industrialized countries, affecting 60–90% of schoolchildren and the vast majority of adults. Water fluoridation reduces cavities in children, while efficacy in adults is less clear. Most European countries have experienced substantial declines in tooth decay, though milk and salt fluoridation is widespread in lieu of water fluoridation.

Although fluoridation can cause dental fluorosis, which can alter the appearance of developing teeth or enamel fluorosis, the differences are mild and usually not an aesthetic or public health concern. There is no clear evidence of other side effects from water fluoridation. Fluoride's effects depend on the total daily intake of fluoride from all sources. Drinking water is typically the largest source; other methods of fluoride therapy include fluoridation of toothpaste, salt, and milk. The World Health Organization reports that water fluoridation, when feasible and culturally acceptable, has substantial advantages, especially for subgroups at high risk, while the European Commission finds no benefit to water fluoridation compared with topical use.

Public water fluoridation was first practiced in the U.S. As of 2012, 25 countries have artificial water fluoridation to varying degrees, 11 of them have more than 50% of their population drinking fluoridated water. A further 28 countries have water that is naturally fluoridated, though in many of them the fluoride is above the optimal level. As of 2012, about 435 million people worldwide received water fluoridated at the recommended level (i.e., about 5.4% of the global population). The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention lists water fluoridation as one of the ten great public health achievements of the 20th century in the U.S.

The goal of water fluoridation is to prevent tooth decay by adjusting the concentration of fluoride in public water supplies. Tooth decay (dental caries) is one of the most prevalent chronic diseases worldwide. Although it is rarely life-threatening, tooth decay can cause pain and impair eating, speaking, facial appearance, and acceptance into society and it greatly affects the quality of life of children, particularly those of low socioeconomic status. Once a cavity occurs, the tooth's fate is that of repeated restorations, with estimates for the median life of an amalgam tooth filling ranging from 9 to 14 years. Oral disease is the fourth most expensive disease to treat. The motivation for fluoridation of salt or water is similar to that of iodized salt for the prevention of congenital hypothyroidism and goiter.

Fluoride can occur naturally in water in concentrations well above recommended levels, which can have several long-term adverse effects, including severe dental fluorosis, skeletal fluorosis, and weakened bones; water utilities in the developed world reduce fluoride levels to regulated maximum levels in regions where natural levels are high, and the WHO and other groups work with countries and regions in the developing world with naturally excessive fluoride levels to achieve safe levels. The World Health Organization recommends a guideline maximum fluoride value of 1.5 mg/L as a level at which fluorosis should be minimal.

In rare cases improper implementation of water fluoridation can result in overfluoridation that causes outbreaks of acute fluoride poisoning.

मानव जीवन के लिए ओजोन परत का क्षरण हानिकारक

खगौल. जगत नारायण लाल कॉलेज में रसायन शास्त्र विभाग और आइक्यूएसी द्वारा विश्व ओजोन दिवस पर दो दिवसीय कार्यशाला का आयोजन प्राचार्या प्रो मधु प्रभा सिंह की अध्यक्षता में किया गया. प्राचार्य श्री सिंह ने कहा कि ओजोन परत का क्षरण मानव जीवन के लिए हानिकारक है. पृथ्वी के वातावरण में उत्पन्न प्रदूषण के कारण लगातार ओजोन परत में ह्रास हो रहा है जो एक गंभीर समस्या का विषय है. लोगों में ओजोन ह्रास के प्रति जागरूकता फैलाने और मानव जीवन हेतु उसकी अक्षुण्णता समझाने के लिए ही प्रतिवर्ष विश्व ओजोन दिवस मनाया जाता है. इसके पूर्व रसायन विज्ञान विभाग की अध्यक्ष सह समन्वयक डॉ शुभांगी त्रिपाठी ने प्राचार्य ,मुख्य वक्ता सहित सभी प्रतिभागियों का स्वागत किया.विशिष्ट वक्ता के रूप में डॉ मेधावी मुदगिल और डॉ पल्लवी ने ओजोनपरत क्षरण: वर्तमान स्थिति और भविष्य की चुनौतियों के बारे में अपना पक्ष रखते हुए,पर्यावरण के बारे में कई महत्वपूर्ण विदुओं को जानकारी दी. कार्यशाला के पहले दिन प्रतिभागियों के बीच ओजोन दिवस से सम्बन्धित पोस्टर प्रतियोगिता, क्विज और भाषण प्रतियोगिता का आयोजन किया गया.कार्यशाला के अंत में ओजोनपरत संरक्षण के लिए पौधा लगाकर वायुमंडल को प्रदूषण मुक्त रखने का संकल्प दिलाया गया.
